

I am opposed to the merger of XM Satellite Radio and Siruis Satellite. I believe that both companies should be forced to run their ground and let the market decide who wins in the long run. Our government should not a forum for bailouts of companies that are struggling, and have struggled from day one just as these two companies have. Both XM and Sirius have made financial commitments into the hundreds of millions of dollars that for the most part have not come to pass in signing up customers. This is not the fault of the consumer, but rather the responsibility of the personal running this large, multi-million dollar companies.

I have been a subscriber of XM for 18 months, am very happy with the service and oppose the merger of the two satellite radio companies.
